

Life Cycle Interrupted When an adult child dies

Sharing one's pain with others won't make it go away, but can make it easier to bear. The grief support group forms a healing circle. It is a safe, structured place where people bound by the experience of loss can come together to share their stories, have their concerns and feelings validated, learn more about the normal grieving process, express and work through their feelings and reflect with one another on the meaning of it all.
