Comfort and dignity as life nears its end

A WIN FOR PATIENTS: MEDICARE EXTENDS HOSPICE OF THE VALLEY’S MEDICARING® PROGRAM

An innovative kind of care combining curative treatment with hospice care

Ted Gushee and his wife Kitty lead a full and active life. When the 92-year-old was diagnosed with lymphoma and bladder cancer, he vowed to fight back. Ted and his physician created a treatment plan that included infusion and radiation, along with an innovative program, called MediCaring®, that provides 24/7 support from a specialized care team.

“It’s like an angel on our shoulder,” Kitty exclaims. “I don’t know what we’d do without it.”

MediCaring® is a unique model of care that allows those with life-limiting illnesses to receive hospice care while continuing their treatments. This program is designed to evaluate the benefits of receiving curative and comfort care simultaneously.

Hospice of the Valley is the only provider in Arizona chosen to participate in the program. It was slated to end in December 2020, but has just been extended through December 2021.

Since MediCaring® began over two years ago, Hospice of the Valley has admitted more than 800 patients. Patient feedback shows that quality of life has been vastly improved.

Ted’s MediCaring® team provides round-the-clock support. Kitty recalls many panicked calls for help in the middle of the night during the coronavirus pandemic, when Ted was in pain and unable to sleep.

“The nurse came out and worked her magic and before long, Ted was emptying the dishwasher!” she laughs. “It’s a wonderful bridge of support for us. With this terrible virus out there, taking Ted to the ER is just not an option.”

Kitty also appreciates how the MediCaring® team takes care of her and makes sure she feels supported. “They always ask how I am doing. That means a lot. I’m not a nurse, so I don’t always know what to do. MediCaring® is very reassuring. It’s wonderful!”

Ted agrees. He is back to living life to the fullest — playing bridge online and directing mini melodramas for his friends.
